Biographical Sketch

"maybe the best young historian we've got, because she understands that to communicate history, you've got to tell the story in an interesting way." - Stephen Ambrose

Up until her untimely death in 2004 at the age of 36, Iris Chang was widely considered one of America's leading Chinese American historians and authors. Chang's first book, Thread of the Silkworm, a study of how Cold-war hysteria influenced American foreign policy, won her instant acclaim. Thread of the Silkworm, is the story of Dr. Tsien Hsue-shen. Born in China, educated at M.I.T. and Cal Tech, who after 15 years of major contribution to American missile technology in research and design, was branded a Communist and deported to China. In China, Tsien went on to advance the Chinese missile program developing the legendary Silkworm missile. Thread of the Silkworm details the imprisonment of Tsien Hsue-shen during the McCarthy era, an event with long lasting repercussions for America's future.

Born in Princeton, New Jersey, and growing up in Champaign-Urbana, Illinois, Iris Chang earned a bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of Illinois in 1989. In college, she became widely known as the woman who always got the job every one wanted. She was published in the New York Times as a college stringer often enough that the New York Times had to discontinue her, lest they appear to favor the news from Illinois. She worked as a reporter for the Associated Press and the Chicago Tribune and received her graduate degree in writing from the Johns Hopkins University in 1992.

Her second book, "The Rape of Nanking," was an international bestseller Chang created an in depth and revealing look at one of the most tragic chapters of World War II. Published by Basic Books in 1997 "The Rape of Nanking" remained on the New York Times bestseller list for several months, became a New York Times Notable Book, and was cited by Bookman Review Syndicate as one of the best books of 1997. Chang felt herself compelled to write the book after her experience in 1994 at a conference in Cupertino: She wrote of the experience.

"I walked around in shock, though I had heard so much about the Nanking massacre as a child, nothing prepared me for these pictures, stark black-and-white images of decapitated heads, bellies ripped open and nude women forced by their rapists into various pornographic poses, their faces contorted into unforgettable expressions of agony and shame. In a single blinding moment I recognized the fragility of not just life but the human experience itself."

Iris Chang's awards include the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation's Program on Peace and International Cooperation Award, the Woman of the Year award from the Organization of Chinese Americans, and two honorary doctorates (the College of Wooster in Ohio, and California State University at Hayward). Chang has been featured on radio, television and in print media, including Nightline, the Jim Lehrer News Hour, Charlie Rose, Good Morning America, C-Span's Book notes, and the front cover of Reader's Digest. She was a tireless speaker, always eager and willing to educate others.

Related Collections

Researchers may also wish to consult a second set of Iris Chang Papers housed in the Hoover Institute located at the Stanford University. Those materials document her research on the history of the Chinese in America, the human rights violations in Nanking (1937-1938) and individual interviews with American military personnel who served in the Pacific during World War II.

Scope Note

The Iris Chang Papers consist primarily of her research materials from her work on “Thread of the Silkworm” with a few files which may have been used for “The Rape of Nanking” and “The Chinese in America.” The content is broken down according to Chang’s own notes. Chang was a meticulous researcher and her files are arranged according to subject matter, and labeled according to her own methods. The series consists of 66 boxes and includes photographs and digital image files.
